The surest test of atrophy of the think tank is to see a man light a corncob pipe in the haymow. This indicates a brain expanion that would make a bullock shed tears. Many a man has had a bright red barn with twelve foot posts faid low in the dust because some fathead with the intellectual reach of a flank steak mistook the havmow for a buffet diner. The man who retreats to the classic confines of a box stall to experiment with "the makin's" ought to be cured of the tobaceo habit by being kicked in the epiglottle by a blind mule.-Kimball's Dairy Farmer.

Getting Into a Life Buoy. The average person in danger of owning usually attempts to lift a life buoy over his head, with the result that he is immediately plunged deeper Into the water. A good swimmer can do this with a sudden npward jerk, but with the nonswimmer it is almost an Impossible feat. What he should do when he has seized the buoy is to place both hands, palms downward, on the buoy on the part nearest the body. pressing it downward and slightly away, when the farther part of the bnoy will rise out of the water and actually fall over the head. The River Tinto. There is in Spain a river called the Tinto, which has very extraordinary qualities. Its waters, which are as yellow as a topaz, harden the sand and petrify it in a most surprising manner. If a stone falls into the river and rests upon nnother they both become perfectly united and conglutinated in a year. A Creature From the Fire. Aristotle believed that some crea-Bess-I sometimes wish I might see tures were capable of supporting life even though confined to the devouring element. He says: "In Cyprus, when the manufacturers of chalcitls (lime) burn it many days in the fire, a winged creature something larger than a great fly is seen emerging from the stone and leaping and walking about in the fire. These creatures perish immediately upon being removed from the furnace." A . . .

HE woodcarver kept his ap- to 3 for confession." pointment the next day at the Bonnetons'. More than that, be seemed in excellent spirits, and as be gut down to Mother Bonneton's modest limeheon he nodded good naturedly to Matthien, the subsilture warehman, whom the sacristan Introduced

The wood arver had thick brown hair, a short yellowish mustache and a clase ant browidsh heard. He was dressed, like a superior workingman, In a tlannel shirt, a rough Idne suit, odl stalned and dust sprinkled, and he wore thick soled boots. The detective was forced to admit that If this was be smiled. a disguise it was the most admirable one he had ever seen.

During the meal Groener talked freely, speaking with a slight Belgian accent, but fluently enough. He seemed to have a naive spirit of drollery. M. Paul marveled at the man's self possession. Not a tone or a glance or n muscle letrayed blm. It was marvelons acting, an extraordinary makenp, lost this was his man, all right. There was the long little tinger plainly visible, the identical finger of his seventeenth century cast. The woodcarver went on to express delight at being back in Paris, where his work would keep him three or four days. Business was lorisk, thank heaven, with an extraordinary demand for old sideboards with carved panels of the Louis XV, period, which they turned out by the dozen-ha, ha, ha-in the Brussels shop. Across the table Matthlen showed his appreciation of this trick in art catering, and he made hold to ask M. Groener If there would be any chance for a man like himself in a woodcarving shop. His present job at Notre Dame was for only a few "Fil helpeyon with pleasure," he said. "But today I enjoy myself. This aftermoon I escort my pretty conshi Alice to hear some imisic.

Sluce the meal began Alice had searcely spoken, but had sat looking down at her plate save at certain moments when she would lift her eyes suddenly and fix them on Groener

"You are very kind, Consin Adolf," she answered finility, "Init-I'm not feeling well today." The girl hesitated, and Mother Bon-

Paul Coquenil"-"Have you never heard of Paul Coquenil?" smiled Matthieu, kleking l'apa Bonneton warningly under the table. Groener answered with perfect shuplicity: "No wonder you smile, M Matthien. But think how far away from Paris 1 live! Besides, I want this to be a happy day. Come, little consln; you shall tell me all about it when we are out together. Run along now and put on your nice dress and Aller rose from the talde, deathly white. It seemed to Coquenil that her eyes met his in desperate appeal, and then, with a glance at Groener, half of submission, half of deliance, she left the room. Matthien bowed politely and, follow ed by the sacristan, went out. "Now, Bonneton," ordered the detec tive sharply when they were in the lower hallway, "I want you to go right across to Notre Dame, and when you get to the door take your hat off and stand there for a minute or so familing yourself. Then Tignol, who's watch-Ing in one of these doorways, will come across and join you. Tell him to be ready to move any minute now. He'd better loaf around the corner of the church until he gets a signal from me. I'll walt here. Now, go on." "I'm golng, M. Panl; I'm golng," obeyed Bonneton, And he Imrried Coquenil saw Alice imprying toward hlm, tense with some eager purpose. "Oh, M Matthieu!" exclaimed the ght in apparent surprise. "I know who you are. You are M. Coquenil," now

"Hoes he know?" The girl's hands closed convulsively. She stammered these singular words: "He knows everything."

"Is he planning something?" For a moment Allce hesitated, hiling her red lips. Then, with a spilek inpulse, she lifted her dark eyes to Co quenil. "I must tell you. I have no one else to tell, and I am so distressed. so-so afraid." She caught his hands pleadingly in hers, and he felt that they were ley cold.

"He's planning to take me awayaway from Parls. I overheard him just now telling Mother Bonneton to pack my trunk. If he takes me away 1-I may never come back." "See here-yen trust me?" asked the detective. "Oh, yes."

"You'll do exactly what I tell you?" "I will," she declared. "Now, listen." And, speaking slowly and distinctly, the detective gave Allee procise instructions: then he went over them again, point by point. "Are you sure you understand?" he asked finally. "Yes, I understand, and I will do what you tell me, but"- She shook her head muxlously. "You don't know, you can't understand, what a"-she stopped as if searching for a word-

Tale of a Queer Happening on a Sightseeing Car.

By O. HENRY. Copyright, 1906, by McClure, Phillips & The rubberneck anto was about ready to start. The merry top riders had been assigned to their seats by the gentlemanly conductor.

The megaphone man raised his instriment of torture; the inside of the great automobile began to thump and throb like the heart of a coffee drinker. The top riders nervously clung to the seats; the old lady from Valparaiso, stop for the Wessagussett team of Pond Ind., shricked to be put ashore. But before a wheel turns listen to a brief preamble through the cardiaphone, which shall point out to you an object of interest on life's sightseeing tour. Swift and comprehensive is the recognition of white man for white man in Africa wilds; instant and sure Is the spiritual greeting between mother and babe; unhesitatingly do master and dog commune across the slight gulf between animal and man; immeasurably quick and sapient are the brief messages between one and one's beloved. But all these instances set forth only slow and groning laterchange of sympathy and thought beside one other instance which the rubberneck coach shall disclose. You shall learn (if you have not learned already) what two beings of all earth's living inhabitants most quickly look into each other's hearts and souls when they meet face to face.

The gong whirred, and the glaringat-Gotham car moved majestically upon its instructive tonr. On the highest rear seat was James Williams of Cloverdale, Mo., and his

. Benjaranananananananananan Nothing was known about Ralpl Hayden, a young man who bought : small ranch in New Mexico, except that he was an Englishman. He was tall and well formed, with light hair and complexion and blue eyes. This, with a winning smile that uncovered white, regular teeth, made film in appearance very attractive. He had brought £2,000 with him from England. with which he purchased and stocked his ranch.

He had no sooner got settled than the neighboring ranchers called on him and invited him to their homes. but he accepted none of their invitations. This excited a good deal of talk among the women at the different ranch houses, all of whom were curious to know why the handsome Britisher would have nothing to do with them. The general verdict was that he considered himself too good for them. Nevertheless Hayden was hall fellow well met with all the men aml soon became popular alike with ranchers and cowboys.

Suddenly be saw a horsewoman leap a fence and rush upon him, swinging a lasso as she rode. Not understanding the movement, he stood still, regarding her with wondering eyes. Coming near him, she threw her lasso, but not at him. Turning, he saw that she had thrown the loop around the horns of a hull. Itrawing his revolver, he quickly kill-

With the high spirited I non to all known bear dapariese, who have not forgotten the seven days at least before said Court. many centuries of chivatry and of hand fighting behind them, the delieately gurved and enriously welded [4] to sword of the samurai has a significance almost sacred. There is a phi osophy of the sworn no less stern than the use of the weapon.

In the old days when the Japanese fighters were the war masks and the steel armor seen nowadays in the enriosity shops the boy was taught that as the shining blade must be kept free from spot and corruption, so must his sonl be ever clean. Neglect of the blade brings rust; neglect of the soul an impure character. Then the sharp edge was held not only as a constant gnardian of personal safety and honor, but as a sacred disciplinarian to punish whenever its possessor stepped from the narrow path of the Yamato spirit of chivalry. Again, the sword was emblematical of true gentility, which is never over-Tearing or vulgar in deportment, fort sternly self repressive. No man knows when first the forge for lighting weapons was set up in the dawn of Japanese history nor who was the man who first replaced the rude bronze blades of a primitive folk by the tempered steel of the Yamato Idade. There is in the imperial collection of swords at the eastle of Nara the weapon worn by the Crown Prince Shotoku, who compiled the constitution of seventeen articles in A. D. 693, the oldest sword known in Japan. From that weapon, which was straight and not curved as all other swords of Nije pan are, down to the fall of the Tokugawa shogimate in the middle of the last century there is an unbroken history of the art of the swordsmith. Twelve centuries of recorded art in swirdmaking and the names of over 10,000 makes constitute the history of the sword in Japan. The Japanese blade, placed almost on a par with the Damascus product in art and utility, differs from the "I can never remember long what It Arabian weapon in one material detail does mean. Its Power to Resist Its Own Gastric One of the greatest questions dis turbing the minds of physiologists both past and present is that of the stomach's digesting powers. It Is asked why the stomach does not digest | itself. It is well known that gastric jnices have the power to digest the tissue of which the stomach is made One of the things actually manufac-

into it, is hydrochloric acid, a powerful agent that will eat up almost anything. Why it does not eat the stomach up is problematical. It is known that a stomach from a dead animal or man can be digested by a living man. It has been found out also that when a man is killed accidentally and his stomach is in the process of digesting, if the body be kept warm, his whole stomach will be digested and possibly, too, adjacent organs, as liver, pancreas, etc. From this it was argued that the "principle of life" kept the process from going on in a living being. Subsequently, however, this was proved to be untrue. A living frog was put in an unconscious condition and his leg inserted through a small hole in a dog's stomach, the dog being alive and well.

wholly digested in the process, although living. So the last reason conceivable was proved incapable of explaining the phenomenon. About the only conclusion left is that the stomach does gradually actually eat itself up, but that it is being constantly rebuilt. However, as this experiment is hard to perform and as no results have so far been announced in this direction, we are left in a state of absolute ignorance, and all we can do is to be devontly thankful to Providence that our stomachs do not digest themselves except in the ordinary

Shoe Industry.

In ordinary seasons the Fourth of July is considered the meridian of the shoe has The man who can hold on when others iness and at that date the height of the let go, who pushes ahead when others season is supposed to be reached. This turn back, who knows no such word as year that date is hardly the proper one to 'cau't" or "give up" will win ont in the select as setting the high-water line, end, no matter what obstacles confront low in spite of the short and delayed season of summer activity, the retail trade has picked up admirably and when all returns are in will probably show that the usiness has been normal to the date, and A unrse had been called as a witness to in some cases, in excess of other years. That there is good ground for the belief n a summer trade in cloth shoes is evi dent from the reports of salemen. They unination staut. "Itida't the doctor flud inquiries for shoes for women that will be lighter and better ventilated than nake several visits after the patient was are the leather shoes, and better in harcision of shoe manufactures to give more attention to this demand will probably result in attractive and confortable women's shoes of cloth that is better than cauvas and harmonious with the gowns woru That men's shoes for snumer will e cloth, in greater numbers, is equally ossible, as better-kept streets make their wear as practical on the street as indoors. Some shoc dealers are finding an inreased deman I for better grades of trade. In spite of duluess, the produc ion of the better grades has held moremarkably well in proportion to that of the mediam and cheaper grades instances are reported from the retail trade where a consistent offering of the best grades has resulted in enlarged business Predictions and ideas regarding styles and their reception next year are now in order, and among them opinions are presented on the cloth top or all-cloth shoe. For some time the cloth-top shoe has sitting next to him, who tapped him on heen tested and found satisfactory, and now it is belived that a large portion of the patent leather boots for fall and winter wear will be made with cloth tops. The cloth top has not made the shoe any cheaper in price, for the material required is expensive, but it has made a comfortable shoe and that is almost as valuable to the boyer as a reduction in price.

The part-cloth shoe naturally leads in good, accompanied with an expectation of the all-cloth shoe and it is expected that attaining it, or a helief that is obtainable. next spring will find such goods plentiful It is more than an emotion, therefore, or in the market. The variety possible is a wish, or a desire: it is a confidence, an great and the use will increase with the supply. As there has been complaint on account of the pain caused by the short vamps, i s likely that the lasts for next season will show some shapes that will afford Tans still afford a topic of argument, and pet the prospect of large demand and sales for the summer of 1911 grows stronger. The separation of the dark and light seasons, or the seasons of black and colors, would be the solution of much other and misumlerstanding, and a step toward conducting the slove industry in a thorough business-like manner.-Boston Transcript

Lydia's Legacy

A Parrot That First Brought Trouble, Then a Husband By CLARISSA MACKIE. opyright, 1910, by American Press

times before she fully understood its meaning. Conched In the heavy phraseology of a country lawyer, it annonneed that the widow of her uncle, Sldmy Ransom, had dled a short time ngo, leaving to Lydia a legacy. The lawyer went on to slate that, although Mrs. Ransom had never seen the niece of her husband, she had been greatly impressed by reports of her kind and amiable disposition, and so to her loving care she left-her pet bird, a par

To Lydla, who detested parrots as noisy, ungraceful creatures, this legacy fell as a calamity in her quiet, well ordered existence. She scarcely remi the badly written postseript, which stated that the remainder of Mrs. Ransom's estate had gone to a favorile nephew

The parrot arrived in a crate. There was a tall perching stand for Polly in the crate with the cage, and the parrot was soon at home on the perch, a chain secured around one leg and fastened to the stand. Lydia found her new companion the source of much amusement for several lays. He learned to call her by name and at times it almost seemed as if she 1 1 had a human companion in her lonely

Her house was situated at the end of the long village street, and few came to her save when there was dressmaking to be done, but Stillwaler was near a large city and most of the women hought their clothes in the ready made shops, so Lydia did not have much to

It was the spring of the year, and Lydia worked unch in her garden. Many times Polly sat near on his perch, shrilly defiant of the wild blrds that hovered curiously about him. Lydia was digging among her pausy plants one morning, transplanting the little green shoots from one hed to an-

"You're growing old, old, old," shrieked Polly, with sudden vindictiveness and a dreary foreboding lu his tone that startled his new mistress. She turned wistful brown eyes in his direction. Lydia Thorne was no longer young, but she still retained a certain sweet youthfulness of expression, and her brown hair showed not one thread of gray. Perhaps it was because her heart would never grow old, for at thirty-eight Lydia was younger than many women at eighteen. She never thought of her age, but now, when Polly repeated himself in a sudden fury of words, she felt that they "You're growing old, old, old as the everlasting hills. Never mlnd, Lyddy shall marry Stephen, and then everything will be all right. Oh, gee!" Polly made a savage peck at a saucy blue jay who had ventured close to his bereh and sent the bandit blrd screaming to the top of a tall elm tree.

Polly scratched his ear reflectively. Toor old Steidien!" Lydia was interested. "Who is Stephen?" she asked. "Stephen's a fool. Hie must marry Lyddy. Then everything will be all right," eackled the blrd.

"What nonsense," eried Lydia Indignantly. "What does the lard mean?" She wondered often after that, for Polly seemed to find great comfort in speaking of the unknown Stephen, and, through Polly, Lydia learned that Stephen was a good boy and a credit to his family and if he would only go and see Lyddy he would at once fall in love and marry her. Then one day came it letter from a bring her legacy. This Lydla was loath to do, for the parret's cage was heavy and most nuwieldy, and she did not really care enough for the blrd to carry it about the country. Nevertheless none of her neighbors seemed willing to undertake its care, so one bright morning found

Lydia and Polly speeding cityward in the railroad train. The parrot proved a diverting companion, and it seemed as if they had scarcely started before the train drew Into the nolsy station where she had to change cars.

Lydia was waiking through the long building, carrying the heavy cage in her aiready tired arms, when Polly set Lydla leaned over the gate and watchup a violent outery. "Stephen! Stephen! Oh, Stephen, wait for Lyddy!" he shrieked frantically.

A man crossing diagonally in front of them paused and looked curiously at the parrot. "That's a good i-oy, Stephen. Marry Lyddy and everything will be all right. Such a handsome Poily!" The bird was tluttering to and fro, and Lydia found difficulty in holding the cage upright.

The stranger approached and lifted his hat. "I am sure Polly is an old friend of mine," he said courteousiy "He recognizes me, and"-Tired Lydla flashed indignant eyes upon him. "Sir!" she sald coldiy. The man turned away with reddening cheeks. He had a nice face, Lydla admitted to herself, but she had been brought up to beware of fascinating strangers, and this individual was the nearest approach to a fascinating stranger Lydia had ever chanced to meet. Polly added tumult to confu-"Stephen! Stephen! Be a good boy-marry Lyddy and everything will be all right!" he screamed Lydla was almost hysterical as the stranger paused again and thrust a finger between the wires of the eage. Polly clung to the finger, crooning toftly. With a sudden movement Lydia thrust the cage in the man's

She was ashamed of her laspatience toward the stranger and thought somewhat mefully that Anact Susan Ransom would have considered her a shrew rather than a kind and amlable person had the good lady seen her III temper on the day of her jour The second evening after her ar rival as they sat at tea Mrs. Brent broke the silence that had fallere between them: "Queer, wasn't it, that Susan Bansom should have left everything to Stephen when he don't need the money and just left you that parrot to take care of? Never saw Susanc in your life, did you?" "No," said Lydia, "last I used to write to Uncle Banson, and then after he died I kept up a correspondence with Aunt Susan. I quite liked her too. She used to write about the parrot, but I never dreamed she would leave it to me. I never liked parrots much.'

"I guess you could have used some money," remarked Mrs. Brent, stirring her tea thoughtfully. "Stephen don't need any more'u he's got." "Is Stephen the nephew?" faltered Lydia, with very pink cheeks. She was thinking of Polly's allusions to

"Stephen." "Of course-Stephen Wood, Queer you never knew his name. Susan thought a sight of him and nagged him day and night because he never got married. He's doing real well in the city-he's in the roal lusiness and is making money hand over fist." "Have you ever seen him?" asked Lydla in a queer volce. "Land, yes! Good looking two. Tali and lean, with clean shaved face and bright blue eyes-colors up like a giri when he's embarrassed. Far and, having heard of Polly's arrival, disappointed you didn't bring it, Lyshe extended permission for Lydia to dia. They say it's a very clever bird. I shall be in Stillwater before long. and I'll see him then."

Lydla was doubtful whether Mrs Brent would ever see the parrot agala, although Mr. Wood might return the bird to her if he knew where she inlight be found, for now she knew it was Stephen Wood who had stopped and spoken to her that day in the rallway statlete. After all, the visit did not turn out

The stage rolled past. The driver waved his will at her, and her gaze followed the vehicle down the long street into the village. She did not hear footsteps approaching from the opposite direction, and as she turned her head Polly's familiar voice broke harshly on the still air:

"Here we are, sir! Well, well! Be a good boy, Stephen, and marry Lyddy"- Polly's voice died away in an indignant squawk as a strong hand reached in the cage and chastised him. It was Stephen Wood bringing Polly

"Mrs. Brent told me you had returned home, and so I have brought the bird back to you. Miss Thorne. I am sure you must have thought me Impertinent that day in the station. Of courso you did not know me, but I recognized Polly's voice and should have made myself known to you at

TORTURE MACHINES.

Curious Instruments That Were Used In the Middle Ages. In an old tower in Nuremburg there is a room set apart especially for the preservation of the curious instruments of torture used during the uncertain period historically referred to as the middle ages. In that room you can see thumbscrews of the most approved pattern closely arranged along shelves filled with "llar helmets" and "bridles" for rossiping women. One horrid relic, called the "spike wheel," is a heavy cylinder on one side of which stand out two or more score of sharp iron spikes. In days of old when an offender had been sentenced to undergo a "rolling" be was stripped naked and firmly bound on a plank, face down. In this position the "spike wheel" was slowly dragged up and down his back, the number of times depending upon the gravity of the crime and the wording of the sentence.

Out of each week's earnings Chandler set aside $1. At the end of each ten weeks with the extra capital thus accumulated he jurchased one genfleman's evening from the bargain counter of stingy old Father Time. He arrayed himself in the regalla of millionaires and presidents; he took himself to the quarter where life is brightest and showiest and there dined with taste and luxury. This one delectable evening called from each dull seventy was to Chandler a source of remascent bliss. To the society bud comes but one debut-it stands alone sweet in her memory when her hair has whitened-but to Chandler each ten weeks brought a joy as keen, as thrilling, as new as the first had been. To sit among hon vivants under palms in the swirl of concealed music, to look upon the habitnes of such a paradise and to be looked upon by them-what is a girl's first dance and short sleeved talle compared with this? Up Broadway Chandler moved with the vespertine dress parade. For this evening he was an exhibit as well as a gazer. For the next sixty-nine evenings he would be dining in cheviot and worsted at dubious table d'hotes, at whirlwind lunch counters, on sandwiches and beer in his hall bedroom. He was willing to do that, for he was a true son of the great city of razzledazzle, and to him one evening in the limelight made up for many dark ones. Chandler protracted his walk until the Forties began to Intersect the great and glittering primrose way, for the evening was yet young, and when one is of the bean monde only one day in seventy, one loves to protract the pleasure. Eyes bright, sinister, carious, admiring, provocating, alluring, were bent upon him, for his garb and air proclaimed him a devotee to the hour of solace and pleasure.

At a certain corner he came to a standstill, proposing to himself the question of turning back toward the showy and fashionable restaurant in which he usually dined on the evenings of his especial luxury. Just then a girl sendded lightly around the corner, slipped on a patch of icy snow and fell plump upon the sidewalk. Chandler assisted her to her feet with instant and solicitons conriesy. The girl hobbled to the wall of the building, leaned against it and thanked him demurely. "I think my aukle is strained," she said. "It twisted when I fell." "Does it pain you much?" inquired

"Only when I rest my weight upon it. I think I will be able to walk in n minute or two."

"If I can be of any further service," suggested the young man, "I will call "Thank you," said the girl softly, but heartily. "I am sure you need not trouble yourself any further. It was so awkward of me. And my shoe heels are horridly common sense. I can't blame them at all." Chandler looked at the girl and found her swiftly drawing his Interest. She was pretty in a refined way, and her eye was both merry and kind. She was inexpensively clothed in a plain black dress that suggested a sort of uniform such as shopgirls wear. Her glossy dark brown hair showed Its coils beneath a cheap hat of black straw whose only ornament was a velvet ribbon and bow. She could have posed as a model for the seif respecting working girl of the best type A sudden idea came into the head of the young architect. He would ask this girl to dine with him. Here was the element that his splendld but solitary periodic feasts had lacked. His brief season of elegant luxury would be doubly enjoyable if he could add to It a lady's society. This girl was a lady, he was sure-her manner and speech settled that. And in splte of her extremely plain attire he felt that he would be pleased to slt at table with her. These thoughts passed swiftly through his mind, and he decided to ask her. It was a breach of etiquette of course, but oftentimes wage earning girls waived formalities in matters of this kind. They were generally shrewd judges of men and thought better of their own judgment than they did of useless conventions. His $10. discreetly expended, would euable the two to dine very well indeed. The dinner would no doubt be a wonderful experience thrown into the duli routine of the girl's life, and her lively appreciation of It would add to his own triumph and pleasure.

"I'm sure you look more charming in them than any one w shall see in the most claborate dinner

"My ankle does hart yet," admitted the girl, attempting a limping step - " think I will accept your invitation, Mr. Chandler You may call me Miss Mar

"Come, then, MIss Marlan," said the young architect gayly, but with perfect courtesy. "You will not have far to walk. There is a very respectable and good restaurant in the next block. Yen will have to lean on my arm-so and walk slowly. It is lonely dining all by oneself. I'm just a little bit glad that you slipped on the Ice." When the two were established at well appointed table with a promising walter hovering in attendance Chan dler began to experience the real joy that his regular outing always brought

The restaurant was not so showy or pretentious as the one farther down Broadway which he always preferred, but it was nearly so. The tables were well filled with prosperous looking din ers, there was a good orchestra playing softly enough to make conversa tion a possible pleasure, and the enisine and service were beyond criticism. Lib companion even in her cheap hat and dress held herself with an air that added distinction to the natural beauty of her face and figure. And it is certain that she looked at Chaudler, with his

He could see that she was vastly impressed by this vague talk, so he indorsed his pose by ran doru insimuations concerning great wealth and mentioned familiarly few names that are handled reverently by the proletarist. It was Chandler's short little day, and he was wringing from it the best that could be had as he saw it. And yet once or twice he saw the pure gold of this girl shine through the mist that his egotism had raised between him and all objects. A very irge and most wonderful display of valable antiques and relics was exhibited and proved to be very interesting to the rowd which witnessed them. Many of he articles exhibited were 150 and 200 years old. The candy, lemonade, and fancy tables, which were attended by young ladies dressed in colonial costume, were centers of attraction. The tea and ice cream parlor was artistically decorated with lanterns, flowers, green longhs, and bunting The entertainment consisted of the following numbers: song. "Consin Jedediali," enacted by the young people in costume: pleasing vocal solos by Mrs. John Taylor and Mrs. Ilnke of North Weymonth, in colonial costume; a very time piano solo rendered by Mrs. White of North Weymouth, vocal duets by Misses Ruth Nash and Helen Ries, olnets by Master Fred Merrill and Miss Priscilla Alden. The exhibit and entertainment were thancially and socially a great success and the exhibit was certainly the most interesting event ever

THE MONTENEGRIN.

Vendetta.

To listen to a Bulgar singing is to make one's flesh creep or want to weep. The centuries of crnel oppression are only too manifest in Bulgarian music and words, but a Montenegrin grows restless over his songs and curses the powers that forbid him to emulate his forefathers' deeds en masse across the frontier. He does so whenever he can, but only in twos and threes. When the Montenegrin goes raiding across the border it is really a more readings by Miss Louise Pettee, and vocal sporting affair than the well equipped and organized outings of the Bulgar "Comitatehis." With him it is usually a private act of revenge or vendetta to which he invites one or two friends. Then they steal across the border at night, find their man, do their best to kill him and then make tracks homeward with the whole district at their ting," so to speak, and do not give him a chance, but as it is the recognized

People wondered why I took such interest in aeroplanes, why I continnally practiced at drlving them, why I studied different makes. I have been a great traveler, though am not yet thirty years old. Some years ago while in Russia I made the acqualatance, followed by the friendship, of a member of the American embassy of St. Petersburg. In this way I saw something of court life there. One night at a function at the Winter palace I was Introduced to the daughter of a general in the Russian service. Not for an earldom would I give her name, so I shall call her Sophia. In my travels I have picked up a number of foreign languages. Russian I speak tolerably, and Sophia spoke some English. There usually comes in a man's ille, if it comes when he is young. some weman who appeals to him as no

From the moment I met Sophia I knew that one had risen up hi my path | dersland this journey over the ice of whom I must possess, else the vitality had passed out of my life. I went to my hotel after my first meeting with her to lie nwake half the night with the comfort one feels In having found a mate, and the other half I dreamed of her. From that time for several months I was with her as often as Russlan etiquette allows. I danced with her, I skated with her. I met her at the opera and

Thomas and family and Mrs Chas Clapp | The pyramlds, the Collsenn, the works of art that had before faselnated me, were now mable to move me. One day I took up a newspaper and saw by telegraph from Russla that a conspiracy against the life of the czar had been discovered and that the ilaughter of a prominent general had St. Petersburg to learn that my unticlpation was correct. The glrl I loved had already been sent to Siberla. Now I understood her action toward me. I felt that a great work had sprung up before me-the work of liberating Sophia. A famous traveler was in St. Petersburg at the time and was about to start, with the permission of the Russlan government, to write up the condition of Siberlan exiles. I suc ceeded in inducing him to appoint me his secretary, or amanuensis. In this way I would be able to locate the girl I had made up my mind to free. Or arriving in the prison region I learned that Sophla's father had been enabled to seeme for her simply exile, not imprisonment. She was living In a hut close by a prison. Escape for her was as impossible as If she had been with-In stone walls. But her position was enconragement for me, whose life work was to take her out of Siberla. I saw her, talked with her and told her that during the same month (August) the following year to expect me with means by which to give her her That autumn and winter I was known to be one of the principal devo tees to the navigation of the air. tried every kind of aeroplane that had been invented. I made long flights both by day and by night. I flew to the Land of the Midnight Sun in the dead of winter, that I might become used to flying in the cold. I tried for no prizes, entered no contests. I worked with one purpose Ia view. That was to make a Illght to Kussla, swoop down by the lint in which lived my love and bear her away to freedom. I pass over the detalls of study by which I found a machine especially adapted for my purpose. I transport ed It by sea to Sweden. From there to my destination was not far, but I must make the journey nt one llight with one supply of fuel. One morning I rose to a height of 500 feet and drove my machine eastward. I pur posely kept at a considerable height till I stood directly over the sophynr but that I might attract the least possible attention. From where I was polsed was a slanting course down to the hut. I hoped that she might be outside, but she was not. I descended o her door. All was slient. I was about to leave the machine to enter the but when I saw her face at the window, and in another moment she was sitting beside me on the machine. I had provided for starting by fitting my machine with apparatus especially adapted to the purpose, and, though keepers were by this time running loward us from every direction, we rose above them and the shots they sent up in time to save ourselves. After a ride high in the air we came

THE ARCTIC PERIL

Peary's Method of Battling With Polar Conditions.

THE USE OF RELAY PARTIES.

Without This System, the Explorer Says, It Would Be a Physical Impossibility For Any Man to Reach the Pole and Return to Tell the Tale. Many persons who have asked why, If Peary got to the pole, it was impossible for Cook to do so will find an unswer in Commander Peary's own story in Hampton's. Although he does not mention Dr. Cook by name, Peary shows how Impossible it would be for it man without his equipment and system to surmount the difficulties of such a journey. He says: "Fortlinde and endurance alone are not enough in themselves to carry a man to the north pole. Only with years of experience in traveling those regions, only with the aid of a large party also experienced in that charac ter of work, only with the knowledg of nretle detail and the confi necessary to prepare himself and party for any and every emergency, Is it possible for a man to reach that long sought goal and return. "In order that the reader may un-

the polar sea it is necessary that the theory and practice of pioneer and supporting partles should be fully nuderstood. "The use of relay partles in arctic work is not new, but the idea was carried further in the last expedition before. "Without this system it would be in physical impossibility for any man to reach the north pole and return to tell the tale.

"First.-Because a single illyislon, comprising either a small or a large mumber of men and dogs, could not possibly drag all the way to the pole and back (some 100 miles) as nuch food and liquid fuel as the men an dogs of that division would consum during the many weeks of the journey. "Second.-It is absolutely necessary that the arduous work of trall breaklng for the first two-thirds of the distance should be done by one division after another in succession in order to save the strength of the main party for its final dash alone.

"Third.-When the supplies of

of the Peary Arctle chib than ever sledge after another have been con sumed the drivers of these sledges and the dogs are superfluous mouths which cannot be fed from the scanty supply over the Ice. "Fourth.-Each division being an dependent unit, these divisions can l withdrawn at intervals from the main party without affecting the main party. "Fifth.-At the very end, when the supporting partles have performed their important work of trall breaking and transportation of supplies, the main parly for the final dash must be small and carefully selected, as a small party can travel so unich faster than n large one. "The ploneer party was one unit division, made up of four of the most active and experienced men of the expedition, with sledges lightly loaded with five or slx days' provisions, drawn by the best dog teams that could be selected from the entire pack. When we started from Cope Columbia this pioneer party, headed by Bartlett, went out twenty-four hours in advance of the main party. Later on, when we reached the time of continuous daylight and sunlight through the twentyfour hours, the pioneer party was but twelve hours in advance of the main

"The duty of this ploneer party was to make a march in every twenty-four hours in spite of every obstacle, excepting, of course, some impassable lead. Whether there was a deep snow or violent winds to be faced or mountalnons pressure ridges to be climbed over, the march of the ploneer party must be made, for pastiexperience had proved that whatever distance was covered by the advance party with its light sledges could be covered in less tline by the malu party, even with heavily loaded sledges, because the main party, having the trail to follow, was not obliged to wastertime in recon-

"In other words, the ploneer party was the pacemaker of the expedition. and whatever distance It made was the measure of accomplishment for the main party. The leader of the ploneer party, in the first instance Hartlett, would start, out ahead of his division, usually of the snowshoes. Then the light sledges of the party would follow after. Thus the leader of the pioneer division was pioneering nhead of his own party, and that whole division was ploneering ahead of the main party,

"One great advantage which I had on this expedition was that, owing to the size of my party, whenever the men in this pioneer division became exhausted with their archions labor and lack of steep 1 coubl withdraw them into the worln party and send ont a fresh division to take their place. A large party is absolutely necessary to success."

The Origin of the Mastiff. Mastiff is a term applied to a very arge and powerful species of the canine family, and there is considerable conflict of opinion regarding the origin of the word. Some claim that it is derived from the Italian mastino or the French mastln, both of which signify targe limbed. This word, they say, was gradually corrupted late masty, a Lincolnshire expression meaning very large, muscular or big, until it gradually assumed its present form. Others again say its true origin is the old German musten, to fatten, because the mastlf is a large dog and so seemsbetter fed than any other.-London.

GIANT BUTTERFLIES.

Have a Wing Spread Greater Than That of Many Small Birds. The largest butterfly known to naturalists is found only in British New Guinea, and specimens are worth anything from $100 upward. The male measures eight inches across the wings and the female not less than Teamster! eleven inches, a wing spread exceeding that of many small birds. The story of the first discovery of this gigantic butterily is a curious one, naturalist saw a specimen perched on the top of a tree and, failing to capture It by any other means, finally shot it. From the fragments he decided that the species was entirely unknown to science, and he forthwith fitted out an expedition at a cost of many thousands of dollars to go in search of the magnificent Insects. Two members of the party fell victlms to the Papnan cannibals and another was rescued only in the niek of time. In spite of this lnauspiclous commencement to his enterprise, however, the naturalist persevered and ultimately succeeded in obtaining a number of perfect specimens

Origin of the Letter V. The letter V may be regarded as the mutilated remains of one of the symhols used by the ancient Egyptians in their hieroglyphics or pleture writing. A common animal in their country was the two horned sand viper, a representation of which stood for V. The priests ultimately found that for the practical purposes of everyday life it was a waste of time to use elaborate hleroglyphics and invented a kind of shorthand to meet the oceasion. In this the snake was reduced to a V with a dash (V-) to represent horns and body. The Phoeniclans adopted this letter, and from them we get our V by loss of the dash, leaving only the two little horns of the original plcture. This snake is stlli common in Egypt and is probably the one menbe a serpent by the way, an adder in that his rider shall fall backward." Travelers tell us that it is still addleted to this unpleasant habit.

Wet Weather and Cameis. Camels are very sensitive to moisture. In the region of tropical rains they are usually absent, and if they come iuto such with caravans the results of the rainy season are greatly feared. The great humidity of the air expialns the absence of the camel from the northern slopes of the Atlas and from well wooded Abysslnia. This sensitiveness expresses itself in the character of different races. The finest, most noble looking camels, with short silk-like hair, are found in the interlor of deserts, as in the Taureg region in north Africa, and they cannot he used for journeys to moist regions. Even lu Fezzan, south of Tripoll, the animals are shorter and fatter, with long coarse hair, and In Nile lands and on coasts it is the same. These nuimals, too, are less serviceable as regards anord and endurance, old. He did not inherit the miserly qualities of his father. He was a quiet fellow and longed for a home, something his father had considered himself too poor to give him. Isaac had not lived the life of a gentleman aml had no idea of meeting and courting a lady for a wife. He desired to marry, but had sufficient sease to understand that he would be the target for designing women. His father had scarcely been laid to rest before isaac was the recipient of a basketful of offers from young women who were anxions to marry him. He read every one of them, thinking that he might see something by which he might deteet genuine good sense, the faculty he most desired in a wife. He did find one that Impressed him with its guilelessness. A girl who gave her name as Blanche Tyron and her age as eighteen sald that some of her friends were putting in applications for his hand and she had concluded to do the same, not that she had any hope of getting the situation, but her mother, who was an invalid and whom she supported, had urged her to do so. She sent with her letter her photograph. There was such honest honocence In the face that Isaac was impressed Isaac did not reply to her letter, but a few weeks later he appeared at her home as an agent for a sewing machln eompany and insisted on selling her a machine. The girl looked longingly at the machine, for she earned her living by her needle and needed a new machine sadly. She regretted that she could not afford to buy it and was turning away when the agent made her a proposition so tavorable that she stopped to think. When a woman hesitates with a salesman at the door she is lost. The agent, withont waiting for her to make up her mind, removed the machine from the wagon to the house. Then he filled in the necessary blanks, and before the girl knew what she was about she had signed them. Isaac had made the installments to Carlsbad last year took the palm. be pald weekly on each Saturday night. When the first payment came due he appeared about 8 o'clock in the evening. and health of every people. For the first time in history the ornithological anthorities in the international conclave are reported to have been able to unite upon some simple course of action that would best check the economic loss of billions of dollars each year that has been shown to result from the killing of the pest destroying and plague preventing wild birds of land and water. By the or nithologists of the nations it is generally conceded that bird slanghter and sale for millinery purposes is the chief cause for the threatened extinction of their valuable bird life, according to Mr. Dutcher. who devoted his entire energies in Berlin to the paramount question of bird protection. While rational shooting laws and acquaint ing the public with the value of birds have been advocated by the congress, its members have made their principal plea to the world powers for the prohibition of export, import, purchase or sale of the wild hirds for millinery purposes. WHIPPED THE LION

A Contest Between Human and Brute Strength.

SANDOW WAS THE VICTOR.

Etripped to the Waist, the Strong Man Wrestled With the Enraged Animal, Who Was Mittened and Muzzled, and Thoroughly Subdued Him.

The story that Richard, later term-l "Coenr de Llon," derived his name from the feat of tearing a live lion's heart out of its body is usually regarded today as apochryphal. At this distance of time it is impossible to tell what was the truth. But If Richard had the strength of Sandow and ont Tuesday evening, throwing a stream strove with the lion under conditions wrestled with a menagerle ilon in San be a basis of fact for the legend. In Accordingly the Hon was mittened and muzzled, but only; with the aid of six strong men, and Isentered the rage unariued and stripped to the walst. What happened was in direct opposition to my expectations; bagging his paws and lneasing his head in a wire enjoyable evening was spent by all cage only served to carrage the brute, and no sooner had, I stepped inside springing upon me.

His eyes ablaze withfury, he hurled had time to recover Laughtilim with my left nrm round the throat and round the middle with my right, and, although his weight was 530 pounds, I lifted him as high as my shoulder, gave him a huge hug to instilk into his mind that he must respect me and tossed him'to the floor. Roaring with rage, the beasternshed

As his paw cut through space not only my lucky sescape, but the llon's weak point and my strong one. If only he struck me once I knew it would be my coup de grace, and I took particular care that he never should. As I ducked my shead to avoid the blow I succeeded in getting a good grip round the lion's body, with my chest touching his and his feet over my shoulders and hugged him with all my strength. The more heastratched and tore the harder, I hugged him, and, although his feet were protected by mittens, his claves tore through my tights and part of my skin. But I had Marion of Providence, R. 1., are guests him as in a vise; his mighty tefforts to get away, proved of no avail. At ouce he sprang rightion my back. Throwing, up my arms, I gripped his head, then, caught thim firmly by the neck and in one moment shot him clean over my head, assisted by the animal's own impetus, and launched him before me like a sack of sawhist, the action eausing thim to turn acconthe Yellow Races. A French savant, M. Lannelengue, in a communication to the Parks Academy of Sciences maintains that among the yellow races, the Chinese, the Japnuese and the Malays, the frot is rused as an organ of prehension. Mke the hand, to a far greater extinct than is generally supposed. He says that while in Tokyo he saw a young man sitting in a theater box grasping the rail with his feet just as though they were hands, ever and anou using his aight foot to scratch his left thigh. The fact that the Japanese usually sit on their heels at meals and in the house develops extreme suppleness and mobility in the feet and toes, and the prehensive function is still further encouraged by the fact that the Japanes e who adhere to the ancient customs wear forked stockings and dispense with the inflexible and constraining European shoe. Chinese postmen naviga te their boats lying down, steering with their hands and rowing with their feet. The oar is held between the big toe and the others. The natives frequently use their feet to collect and to pick up small objects lying on the ground, and sometimes even catch mice with their toes. M. Lannelongue holds, that the yellow races, who are able toruse their feet somewhat as the elephant uses his trunk or the monkey his tail, enjoy a very considerable advantage in the everlasting strugglesfors existence over the less fortunate Causasians, who are able to employ their Deet only for locomotion purposes.—Il ladelphia Ledger.
